

Brainbiter!

Three apparently unconnected assassinations - but each one exactly twenty-eight days apart. Is this some kind of lunar madness, or something much more sinister. In each case the victim is of left-wing or racial equality sympathy, and in each case the assassin immediately kills himself, calling out to the Master before he dies. Is there a connection between the killings and the disappearance of Sir Robert Morris, an eminent neurologist, once tipped for a Nobel prize? What is the significance of the unusual shield-like lapel badge found in the flat belonging to Sir Roberts niece? And who is the Master, seemingly controlling an odd assortment of young drug addicts? Special agent McAdam has twenty-eight days to unravel the mystery - to stop not only another assassination taking place, but the possible systematic elimination of national political figures.
